From the Editor...

Been a VERY busy spring and summer. My recent separation has thrown a monkey wrench into my advance planning and I have had to cancel out of some events that I don't normally miss. But that's life. Cataract surgery, Doctors appointments for both ends (IT'S NOT FUNNY) and then a week at the Badger's shrine. Flew out of Detroit for a visit with Glen Wright in Tennessee, the third of the threesome that puts on the DCMSM&A every year in Montreal. We put together the floor auction for next April that we will talk more on at a later date.

Then adding fuel to my already full fire, a tornado hit my house while I was down in Tennessee on my visit. Found out the morning of Aug. 25th with a video message from my son. Lots of damage but insurance should cover some of it. I was lucky as my neighbour 2 doors down lost most of his roof and they just had new hardwood floors installed upstairs. WOW!!

Anyway, there are just some of the reasons that the magazine is so late.....

One week later. Started having trouble with my eyes and it turns out I had a virus which was making it impossible to see my computer. Finally able to see it enough to get the magazine finished off.

letters to the editor

Anyone want to talk about dying? No! Yet all of us will.

My wife and I recently updated our wills and had to decide about what happens when.... What happens to our stuff and who looks after it. Now if anyone says that they don't need a will just ask a family where someone did not have one. Or you might be saying I don't have enough assets to worry about. What about your collection.?

All of us have accumulated collections that are worth, in some cases a substantial sum. Even if we don't have all the 5* badges if you just assigned $5 per badge in you collection and traders it can add up. Not to mention all the other stuff that we tend to accumulate like hat plumes, flag finials and books.

There are a few things you can do to plan for that eventual day. 1) start getting rid of your collection while you can, 2) provide instructions how to get rid of things after you die, 3) give it to your kids. Mine have already told me they don't want it and we need to remember that collecting Scouting material is a bit of a niche market and the reality is there are not that many collectors.

Whatever you plan to do the key is to plan. Be prepared which sounds kind of familiar. An up to date will, can provide instructions and make the life of your executor easier.

Hi Mike,

I spent a day at the Guide House Archives on my way home from my June road trip to Toronto.

The result is a whole bunch of additions and a couple of changes to the Alberta listings.

I've sent the updated file to Steve for download onto the website, but the attached is the list of the major changes.

Have a good rest of the summer. I'm off to England - will be attending the Midhurst Swap Meet and Gilwell Reunion the following week.

Let me know if there are any questions.

Linda

Traditional Scouting Rep.

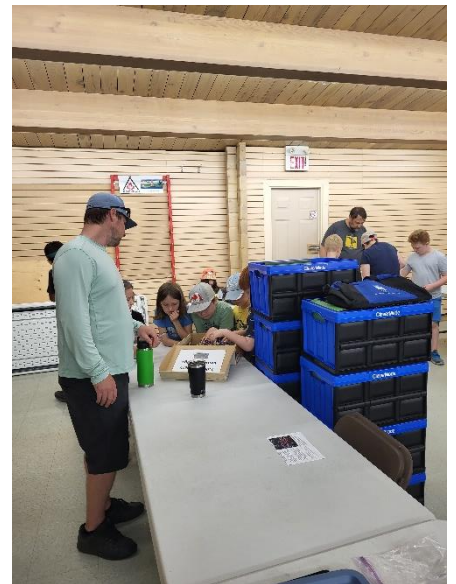

So, what is traditional Scouting?

Starting in the 1990's (and perhaps earlier) some people became dissatisfied with changes they saw taking place in Scouts Canada and set up the Baden Powell Scout Association. As a result of a copyright infringement law suit it became Baden Powell Service Association. But wait there were/are others. One of the latest is the Canadian Traditional Scouting Association which is the rebranded Traditional Explorer Council. There is a more complete list at Canadian Scouting Associations - ScoutDocs

Over the years there have been many Scouting organizations in Canada affiliated with Scouts Canada. We all know about Les Scout, but few know that the Salvation Army Life Saving Scouts are also affiliated with Scouts Canada. After World War 2 there were several exile Scout movements in Canada. The ones I know of were/are Hungarian, Latvian and my favourite (three of the trainers on my part II were from this one ) Estonian. But there are other groups....

As I understand my job description, I am to try to keep track of these and figure out name changes etc. Each of these groups has issued badges, some still used, some not. So, I'm asking for your help in this task as some of these groups appear and disappear. Some of their local groups have left Scouts Canada for a while and returned so it is not always easy to track groups or associations.

Badge Chatter

Greetings from the cataloguer! This issue I have heard from Peeter Tammark and Linda Aug regarding new finds and badge questions.

Linda recently purchased a number of Council badges and brought them to my attention as there is some, mainly minor, variations. A bit interesting going over them as some badges had variations on the current issue and others variations on a previous issue of the Council badge. It makes me wonder how such re-ordering decisions are being made but enough said. Anyway, back to my point I found 10 Council badges that had minor (usually) variations as shown below.

The bottom line for listings is that the Nova Scotia Council badge is being listed as NS 2D. The others will get notes only as the difference is not considered sufficient for a new listing. Here is a clearer picture of the new NS 2D shown along with NS 2A, 2B (two minor variations) and 2C.

Interestingly, it most resembles 2B. That is especially clear from the white pattern in the water and also the lack of stitching on the inset Nova Scotia crest. What is notable about the new listed NS 2D is the yellow (rather than orange) in the sky above the Bluenose sail boat. Also the lines on the lighthouse are indistinct, the rocks are a lighter shade of grey and the scout emblem is a little different.

Back to those other Council badges shown above. Here is what I noticed and will eventually be fit into the listing notes:

Quebec. Current 4A shield pinkish lines on inset badge which is pointed. New: Inset badge has white lines and a round shield.

NL new one has a yellow background; 2A was dark yellow almost orange yellow.

NB Current one more like 3B than 3C. a bit longer and the trees on the left side are a bit further away from the border.

ONT Voyageur. Writing almost italic vs 8D which the new badge most resembles.

ONT Shining Waters. Background a shade of scarlet rather than maroon like 6C.

ONT Central Escarpment. New badge is like 3B rather than 3C. Yellow near trillium is lime greenish rather than dark green.

Chinook Alberta. Like 6B but more rounded corners on bottom, stylised mountains a darker brown and border a lighter blue.

Pacific Coast Council. New badge like 7C. Lighter blue in background.

Fraser Valley Council. New badge like 6C. Scouts Canada text more upright than the listed 6C which has slanted text.

While there are differences these are not bank notes so some variation should be expected. A key criteria on whether to list minor differences or not is whether or not the change is easily distinguishable from other varieties. The new Nova Scotia met this test.

Peeter Tammark had an interesting question, that I do not know the answer to and that relates to the A issues of the various Ontario Huron Trail badges (H10A, H11A and H12A). This is a two piece badge rather than the B issues which were one piece badges. Sometimes one comes across just the written, top part of the Huron Trail's A badges rather than the whole two piece badge. The question in Peeter's mind was whether the written part was worn alone on uniforms before a two piece badge was produced. Does anyone know?

Ontario H.12.A top portion of the two piece badge.

Has anyone been frustrated with the Club's Canadian National listings of the Scout strip (National 9) in the catalogue – that is besides me! Linda Aug and myself have been going over the wordings, the pictures in the Club Website, actual badges and so on. Changes, taking into account uniform information in early catalogues is on the way. This task is only partially complete so we will delay springing the new listings until all is settled. Stay tuned.

Just before closing this issue of Badge Chatter I thought I would share a page I have related to Alberta M7A Maskepetoon Region. Its kind of fun to not just find the listed badge but background to it. Oh, and what is Maskepetoon? The great Cree Chieftan in the Central Alberta area who travelled widely in the interests of Peace. The broken arrow is the symbol of peace.

DENIS CHARBONNEAU
MEMORIAL
SWAP MEET & AUCTION

A week spent down in Maryville, Tennessee with my good friend Glen Wright. We assembled the floor auction from what remained of decent donations and as usual, Glen added quite a few from his own swap box (this happens quite often). We are now out of any donated badges that are worthy of the DCMSM&A floor auction. So here is my plea to all our members. If you want the auction and swap meet to continue, we need some great to stupendous donations. If I were to get a badge of good quality from even half of the members that attend, that would give us a great start for 2024. So please, dig deep.

Best regards,
